3. The degree of success attained by each of our projects is directly related to the quality of the weather support received. Colonel Shtogren has the direct responsibility of providing that support. Its quality depends largely upon his personal interest in our projects. He has been briefed on their importance in the past. However, his organization also supports many other "important" activities.

4. It therefore behooves each of us to impress him with the national significance of the DPD projects and with the professional manner in which they are conducted. The purpose, scope, past accomplishments and future aims of each project should be covered, with emphasis on the part each plays in the national defense effort.
